

THEORETICAL KNOWLEDGE TRAINING (DISTANCE LEARNING)

The ATPL Theoretical Knowledge - Distance Learning approach comprises of distance learning and classroom sessions split into three modules, enabling you to focus on one third of the subjects at a time, while building and applying your knowledge.

Each module is mapped out in a study guide and consists of reading assignments, course tests and ground school days. After successfully completing a module you will take the corresponding UKCAA or EASA exams.

How distance learning works

The L3Harris ATPL Distance Learning course comprises distance learning and classroom sessions split into three modules. Our three-module system lets you focus on one third of the subjects at a time, while building and applying your knowledge.

Our trainees receive an all-round pilot education throughout the course, fully compliant with the latest UKCAA/EASA syllabus.

Classroom tuition

Classroom tuition takes place at regular dates throughout the year at the state-of-the-art London Training Centre.

Successful completion from this programme will provide you with:

> 13 x Theoretical Knowledge exams following either the latest UKCAA or EASA syllabus
