

FUNDING YOUR PILOT TRAINING

Private and state student loans for flight school

There are various ways L3Harris cadets can finance their pilot training and we understand that the right option will be different from person to person. Our Financial Aid Officers can help you identify and apply for the support that best suits your current situation and requirements including from some of the following private finance options.

ALASKA RESIDENT LOAN

The Alaska Resident Loan is also known as the Alaska Supplemental Education Loan (ASEL) or the Alaska Family Education Loan (FEL) is a flight training loan available to Alaskan residents who are undertaking pilot training at an aviation school out of state.

AOPA FLEX FINANCE LOAN

International students can also apply for this aviation loan if they can show 2 years of USA tax history. Alternatively, if students cannot show this, they can still apply for this student flight school loan with a cosigner who can prove 2 years of USA tax history.

AMERICAN AIRLINES CREDIT EDUCATION LOAN

If you are a member of the American Airlines Credit Union, you could be eligible for a student loan for flight school of up to $40,000. This loan requires repayment as soon as the funds have been sent and requires a repayment term of up to 10 years.

WE FLORIDA FINANCIAL (WEFLY)

The state of Florida also offers aviation loans to its residents. Florida residents or members with the AOPA could be eligible to borrow up to $30,000 for aviation courses. For this loan, the repayment term is 6 years.

NEW JERSEY CLASS LOAN

Similarly, to the Alaska Resident Loan, the New Jersey Class Loan is available to residents of the state of New Jersey who are attending a flight training school out of state.

VERMONT ADVANTAGE LOAN

Residents of the state of Vermont can also apply for a dedicated student flight school loan. The Vermont Advantages Student Loan allows cadets to borrow up to the total cost of their chosen flight training course.

FLORIDA NATIONAL GUARD

The Florida Educational Dollars for Duty (EDD) program is available for Florida National Guard Soldiers and Airmen and can support public tuition for the period of the Guard member's service. This type of flight school funding is an alternative method of funding a flight training course.
